VIOLENCE

"She had never been in a space where the story "fit" into the conversation; she had never heard anyone talk about sexual violence as part of the fabric of police violence, or about police as perpetrators of sexual violence" (Ritchie, 105).

The little data that has been published on police sexual violence indicates that a high number of officers had lost their licenses as a result of police sexual violence. One study found that ~1000 officers across the country lost their license over a five-year period, but a lack of internal reporting and external investigating skews the data to show very little of the reality of police sexual violence.
